Here, individual work is broken into parts and steps that students work through together. Group work refers to a collaborative learning environment where students work through problems and assessments together. Students are able to delegate roles and responsibilities, pool their knowledge and skills and receive support from one another.
- 2) It isn't unethical. But students with strong skills must show the way how to solve the problem or help a little bit, but they mustn't do assessments for someone else.

- 4) Their behavior was unethical, because they were aware of Kim and Mehmet's problems with language. They must have understood that it wasn't the way out to do the work for them. They must have explained how to cope with it but maybe they just didn't want to spend time doing this that's why they had decided to do it by themselves.
- 5) They worried about Professor, that he would learn everything and then everyone would have trouble. But anyway, they agreed to be helped.

- 8) To my mind, it will be better if the students are divided into groups according to their language levels in order not to have such unpleasant situations. Then it's appropriate to offer obligatory special classes for foreign students to learn language. And for them not to miss classes it will be good to be punished for missing. Of course, the professor should be a little bit loyal because foreign student will never know the language as he or English-speaking students in the university.

Dear professor Mallory,

We are sorry to confess that we have let the students in our group do our section. We understand that group work refers to a collaborative learning environment where students work through problems and assessments together. And we as Students must delegate roles and responsibilities, pool their knowledge and skills and receive support from one another. But Professor Mallory our knowledge of English is very poor and Susan, John and Mary worried too much about their grade for the project. Of course, we clearly understand that it's all our fault and we are the ones who must be blamed and punished according to all the rules of the university. But professor please be loyal to us because we are the foreign students and English is a big problem for us. We promise we will attend language classes without missing in order to improve our language skills. Please professor as for the rest members of the groups, they aren't guilty in this crime, so you shouldn't punish them. They just wanted to get excellent grades.
