

Is homework harmful or helpful

The value of homework has been widely discussed among a great number of people from small kids to old people. The most important thing in studying is improving and advancing your personal skills and abilities. But is the system of education well enough balanced, informative and educating?

On the one hand, homework is a necessary part for every student in their life. Firstly, homework helps you not only to improve the acquired knowledge but also develop your skills, for example children do many creative tasks, search a lot of information and get acquainted with different sides of studying. Secondly, homework teaches everyone some responsibility and be engaged in useful business. It also can prevent children from getting into bad companies and making some unimportant stuff. Thirdly, the systematic education and instruction of young generation makes them develop not only the level of intellectual achievements but also train their mental powers that lead to the strengthening of the powers of body and mind. Besides, homework enriches your cultural outlook.

On the other hand, homework maybe not fun, but not everything in life is funny and interesting. Unfortunately, due to statistic only 36% of people are satisfied and happy with homework. Firstly, homework seems terrible because of tons of tasks which cannot be done during the whole weekends so; you become unable to go out with your friends, read books for pleasure and take up hobbies. All of these make children really miserable. Secondly, children have no opportunity to cope with all boring and typical assignments fast that may be the greatest extinguisher of children's curiosity. Thirdly, children must spend most of time sitting and doing the exercises that may cause stress and negative health effects such as curvature of the spine.

In conclusion, I want to say that homework helpful or harmful is a personal opinion and being a child you want to be a child and do not do as it seems unnecessary stuff. But I think if you relate simply to everything, you will find more positive sides and spare time for yourself.